Insurance costs rise with inflation and catastrophic weather events

Local insurance broker Holly Stark with Stafford-Leavitt Insurance Services explained some of the reasons insurance costs continue to rise. A guest of Larry Pfautsch, Holly pointed first to statistics showing a dramatic increase in the number and severity of catastrophic weather events. There were 104 such events in the 2017-22 period.

Meanwhile, repair and replacement costs have also skyrocketed in recent years, jumping 40%. That also means many buildings are underinsured, in other words not keeping up with inflation. A ripple effect is that insurance carriers are paying more for the reinsurance they buy to help cover their losses.

This situation is also complicated by a shortage of skilled labor, which drives up repair costs and reduces the number of competitive bids.

All of this is causing some carriers to withdraw from certain markets and to change the terms of their policies, especially on wind and hail damage, from a flat deductible to a percentage while also factoring in the age of the roof or structure.

One option to save money, Holly said, is a separate policy that fills the gap between covered losses and actual losses.

Announcements from last week's meeting

- President Grant welcomed new corporate members Kennan and Melissa Ford with Reed Automotive. They will be installed at a later date.
- Jayden Love won the Secret Greeter dollar coin.
- John Foster contributed to the PolioPlus bank, calling attention to an article in Rotary magazine about Missouri native Larry Lunsford, a member of the Plaza Rotary Club, who will become Rotary International president in 2027-28.
- John also reported on an attendance makeup at the Branson-Hollister club where he recalled speaking years ago about perfect attendance when he was district governor.
